3 Registration Procedures

3.1 Transfers

3.1.1 Cats or kittens which are already registered with another FIFe member or with a recognised non-FIFe registry may be transferred into the Felis Britannica registry upon production of suitable pedigree and ownership documents.

3.2 Kitten Registrations

In accordance with FIFe Breeding and Registration Rules 5.1.1. all kittens bred by a person holding membership within a FIFe club must be registered with FIFe in the first instance; this does not preclude subsequent registration with another organisation.

3.2.1 The kitten's name will include the breeder's cattery name as a prefix or suffix, with or without apostrophe as designated in the FIFe Book of Cattery Names.

3.2.2 If the breeder does not have a cattery name registered with FIFe, each kitten will be given a Felis Britannica administrative prefix. If the breeder does not hold a cattery name, a maximum of two litters may be registered using an administrative prefix as determined by Felis Britannica. The breeder must apply for a FIFe cattery name before breeding a third and subsequent litter.

3.2.3 The name of a kitten must differ enough from that of any other cat or kitten with the same prefix to enable identification without question.

3.2.6 A pedigree will be issued for each kitten registered.

3.2.7 To register kittens with Felis Britannica, the queen must be registered in the Felis Britannica Registry. The stud must have a certificate of entirety lodged with Felis Britannica.

3.2.8 A queen who is not resident with its Felis Britannica registered owner will be regarded as still owned by its Felis Britannica registered owner who will remain responsible for all breeding decisions concerning that queen, and for the welfare of that queen.

3.2.9 Sires of kittens to be registered with Felis Britannica need not be registered with Felis Britannica, but if they are not so registered then the following are required:

- a) An original certified pedigree issued by a recognised registry showing at least three generations of ancestors, or as specified in the relevant breed policy.
- b) A valid certificate of entirety. This is a veterinary certificate confirming that the testicles are normal and are both descended into the scrotal sac. The certificate should clearly show the registered name of the cat and its microchip number.
- c) If the stud is not owned by the Felis Britannica registered owner of the queen, then a mating certificate signed by the registered owner of the stud is required.
- d) If the stud is not resident with its registered owner, both the registered owner and the current keeper of the stud must sign the mating certificate.
- e) proof of the ownership of the stud

3.2.10 When a stud cat is placed on loan with another breeder who is a member of a Felis Britannica club, the registered owner may give authority to the borrower to supervise matings and sign mating certificates on behalf of the registered owner while the stud is on loan.

Two copies of this authorisation signed by the owner and the borrower must be sent in advance to the owner's registering club (one of which will be forwarded to the Felis Britannica registrar) to be placed on record. A copy must also be available for inspection by the owner of any queen taken to the stud. When a stud is placed on loan, it is strongly recommended that a written loan agreement is signed by both parties. Felis Britannica cannot arbitrate in the event of a dispute.

3.2.11 All kittens bred by from Felis Britannica members must be registered with Felis Britannica, by the age of 6 months.
